FINDING LIST

BOOKS COMMON TO THE

BRANCHES

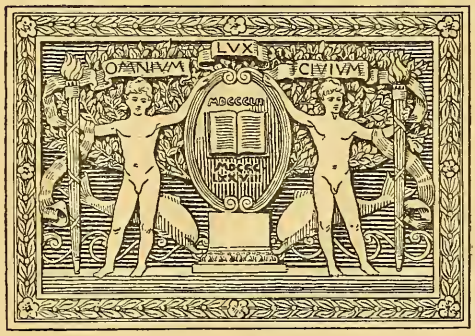
OF THE

PUBLIC LIBRARY

OF THE

CITY OF BOSTON

No. 5
September, 1902



BOSTON
PUBLISHED BY THE TRUSTEES
1902

Feb. 26 1903.

PREFACE.

With few exceptions the titles in this list may be found at all the Branches except that at West Roxbury.

Previous issues of the Branch Finding List have contained only the accessions since June 1, 1897; this issue includes all the important titles which are common to the Branches. It should be understood, however, that the Branch collections are still far from being uniform or adequate in certain classes, and that this list is in no sense an ideal one.

Books are entered here according to classes, and under the author's name only, except in the following divisions: Individual Biography, where the subject precedes the author; Fiction, where each book is entered under title as well as author; Books for Younger Readers, where a separate list by titles has been added to the author list.

SUGGESTIONS FOR USE OF THE FINDING LIST.

A close attention to the scheme of classification is recommended.

To find a given book, look under the author's name, in the proper class or division; for example Fiske: The American Revolution will be found under Fiske, in the division allotted to United States history. Under Fiction and Books for Younger Readers a book may be looked for by title also. If you do not find a book readily, consider whether you may not be looking under the wrong division, as, for example, in Natural Science, when the book is entered under Useful and Industrial Arts, or in the general division, History, when the book is, perhaps, Juvenile History. Use also the author index at the end of the List to find on what pages an author's name appears. This index does not, however, include authors of fiction or of books for younger readers.

If you know only the title of a book, it will be necessary to look through the titles under the proper division until you find the one you want, except in the important classes of Fiction and Books for Younger Readers. In the card catalogues of the Branches, however, you may find a book at once by its title.

It is obvious that all the books which the Branches contain upon a given subject may be easily found by looking under the proper class or classes.

In case of any difficulty, call freely upon the attendants to assist you.

THE BRANCH CLASSIFICATION.

In the system of classification which has been adopted for the Branches the books of the collections are arranged under certain main classes representing the larger divisions of knowledge, and these classes are each divided into sub-classes. The main classes are designated by capital letters, the sub-classes by small letters. Within each sub-class the books on the shelves are as nearly as possible arranged alphabetically according to their authors. Each author in the sub-class receives a number, and in the case of several books in a sub-class by one author a decimal denotes the number of the particular work. For example, in the number Nw 1620.2, which is that of Bird Studies with a Camera, by Chapman, the capital letter N represents the main class, Science; the small letter w, the sub-class, Ornithology; the number 1620 is the author number; the decimal number .2 is the number of the work.

For reasons of convenience the alphabetical arrangement of titles in this Finding List generally follows the main classes.

Fiction has no class letters, but is designated by an author number, followed by the first letter of the author's name, and a book number. For example, the call number of St. Ives, by Stevenson, is 28s 16, in which 28 is the author number, s the author's initial, and 16 the number of the work.
